College Choices

The medical field is for individuals who enjoy working to help others. You have to be caring, cheerful, and you must have a desire to help others. You also have to be organized, have social understanding, and good time management skills. I feel that I possess these skills, so I think that I will do well in the medical field.

If I were to choose the career that I would be pursuing in the future, I would be a Pharmacy Technician. I would choose to be a pharmacy technician because I when was growing up both my mom and grandmother worked in the medical field. Ever since I was little I have wanted to be in the medical field. Pharmacy technician positions typically require a minimum of a high school diploma; however, most employers give preference to candidates with formal pharmacy technician training. Some potential obstacles I could face in reaching my career goals could be, not getting enough experience, not continuing in your education after high school, and not having enough time and money to receive all education need to reach your goals.

My first college choice would be to attend Stanford University to obtain the needed degree to be a Pharmacy Technician. I chose to go to Stanford because it is ranked number two out of the colleges in the United States of America<sup>1</sup>. The challenges I would face to go to Stanford are paying the out of state tuition, participating in activities that would look good on a college application, and being away from my family. In order to attend Stanford University you have to have a very high GPA and very high test scores for the SAT and the ACT along with after school activities. Overall I feel that even with its challenges, continuing my education at Stanford would be what is best for my future.

If I am not accepted into Stanford University, I would choose to go to Mercer University. I would choose to go to Mercer because out of the medical schools in Georgia it is ranked third out of the whole state, also because if I went to Mercer I wouldn't have to pay out of state tuition. The potential obstacles of going to Mercer would be getting homesick, leaving your friends behind, and being able to balance your time between studies and new friends you have made. I feel that Mercer University is a great university to attend to continue my education after high school.

There are so many colleges to choose from to put me on the best path for my future. Mercer and Sanford University are just some of the great medical schools offered today. Being a Pharmacy Technician in this time period means that there are so many options available to me, and I am thankful for this opportunity.
